So, how does it work? Teams of 6 to 10 members explore a pre-determined hunt area, on foot, solving clues, gathering items or information, completing team challenges and taking team photos. What it takes to be successful is strategy, communication, creativity and the ability to have a little fun!

Whether you choose one of our existing hunts... or have one customized, you will find our hunts professional and affordable.

During these difficult times, many organizations are tempted to cut back on training...particularly training which involves teambuilding exercises or the development of 'softer' skills. Our response is - don't do it!! Cutting your training budget may seem like a good idea, but if ever there was a time for organizations, departments and teams to work together more effectively and develop the leaders of tomorrow, the time is now!

Every day we hear news of organizations that are restructuring to survive. This can mean changing team structures, losing vital personnel, merging offices or project teams, and changing work patterns.... which can result in a drop not only in team spirit and collaboration, but in effectiveness and productivity. It is time to think seriously about how to bring teams back up to peak performance levels and help them focus on the 'we' culture that is vital to corporate survival.

And we're not the only ones who think so. A recent webinar given by the Hay Group, in association with Chief Executive Magazine, on the top 20 global companies asked, "what do they have in common?" High on the list was developing leaders; engaging and motivating employees; effectively managing through the downturn; and ensuring that leaders and teams are prepared, trained and ready to thrive in the upswing.
